"I might have some reserva-tions about some of those chang-es, but if it makes sense and is practical. I think we have an on the back burner and 'orget about it." Cruse said.

While many of the aldermen agree with the proposal "in theo-ry," several of them have ques-tions about the timing of the issue, how the study would be handled, and the need to expend $15,500 when some of them say they could be the city's operations themselves.

"Several of us who have served on the Finance Committee of the past five or six years know there is not a single department in the city where there isn't waste." Alderman Jeff Worthen said. He and Aldermen Sandy Crutes and Jim Miler questions of which would be released within weeks of the April 20 municipal election, and wanted to know who would have access to the final report. They also wanted to know who would serve on a committee that would serve on a committee that would review a draft of the study's findings before a final report is issued. "I don't want to see an alderman or any member of the Chamber (of Commerce) influence this audit, "Worthen said. "Whoever is on the committee can manipulate the information so that it is completely different before it goes to the City Council." Crites said.

Miller questioned the need for a preliminary review.
Melville has good credentials. I don't think we need to tell them where to look around.
Miller said.
He also wondered if input from the Chinber of Commerce might sway the results.

"What will our business leaders say if the study finds that their Lixes should be increased?" Miller asked.

Moreover, the sponsor noted, the state's current taxing structure is regressive—to the state's current taxing structure is regressive—to the disproportionate share of taxes.

Some delegates expressed a concern that any increase in the income tax should be accompanied to the could be accomplished through legislation, should a constitutional amendment be approved by voters.

School board delegates also expressed support for legislation that would give school districts greater flexibility with regard-fostate mandates and use of grants. Such a change would allow school officials and teachers to use limited resources more creatively to meet the educational needs of children, delegates felt.
